Don’t fall for the phishing trick

You wouldn’t give this creep your car or home keys, so why would you email him your password or personal information?
Just because he asked for it?

“Phishing” is when email purporting to be from a legitimate source attempts to trick you into volunteering your personal or credential-related information. These messages vary in content, but all claim to be from legitimate sources such as eBay, your bank, PayPal, or the College.

If you receive such a message, treat it as spam and delete it.
